- We recommend that all users use personal pseudonyms or nicknames for the purposes of the internet, which will allow them to possess an authentic "digital identity" that does not compromise the security of their personal and professional lives.
- We recommended that users take special care when publishing audiovisual and graphic content in their profiles, as these actions may put the privacy of people in their environment at risk.

- We recommended that users check and read (both before user registration and subsequently) the general terms and conditions of use and the privacy policy that the platform places at their disposal on their websites.
- We recommended suitably configuring user profile privacy levels on the social media so that the profile is not completely public, but only accessible to those persons classified as "friends", who will have access to the information published in the profile, or to those "direct contacts" previously chosen by the user.
- We recommend that you accept as contacts only those persons known to you personally or with whom you have a prior relationship, and do not automatically accept all the contact requests you receive, while investigating whenever possible and necessary the identity of the person requesting your contact through the social network.
- We do not recommend publishing physical (geographical) contact information in user profiles that allows third parties to know where users live, work, study or the places that they usually frequent during their leisure time.
- With respect to the users of microblogging tools we recommend taking special care regarding the publication of information on where they are at all times.
- We recommend only using and publishing content covered by intellectual property rights, if not users may be liable to committing a civil offence under Spanish legislation.
- We recommend that users use different usernames and passwords to enter the different social media they belong to.
- We advise using passwords with a minimum length of 8 characters including numbers and capital and lower case letters.
- We recommend that all users should install and properly update antivirus software on their computers.
- All the information concerning the website must be read. It provides information on the website owners and why data is requested.
